Just When You Think You've Heard Everything

Mike Metzgar with the North Carolina Beach Buggy Association (NCBBA) shares this amazing story that appeared in the Feb. 16, 2010 edition of USA TODAY.

Mike asks an interesting question, "What's next? U.S. Air Force drones spying on the nests, hidden microphones and cameras, sensors in the sand to detect intruders, U.S. Marine Corps snipers?"

Mike concludes with a serious question, "Hasn't this effort and cost to maintain the safety of this bird become absurd?" Read the USA TODAY article and you decide ---

Massachusetts: Wellfleet — The Cape Cod National Seashore will work with the U.S. Department of Agriculture this spring to create fake plover nests on two beaches and fill them with chicken eggs laced with poison to protect endangered piping plovers from predatory crows. Public information meetings about the plan are Feb. 25 in Eastham and March 3 in Provincetown.
